

THE DRUNKMEN'S MARSEILLAISE

LA MARSELLESA DELS BORRATXOS

BY PABLO GIL RITUERTO

During summer, a film crew tours the roads and towns of northern Spain. They follow in the footsteps of the clandestine trip made by the Cantacronache group, which in the summer of 1961, during the Franco dictatorship, collected popular songs from the resistance. Through the prism of oral memory and the sound files recorded in 1961, the two trips dialogue, forming an emotional and political geography of a territory in which the wounds of the past are still open.
